Paul Davis Restoration and Remodeling announces staff certifications

Albuquerque, NM – April 8, 2011 - When property owners experience significant weather disruptions such as springtime winds and looming monsoons, it can cause disruption to their lives and sometimes, loss of business revenue. At times like this, Paul Davis Restoration and Remodeling, owned by Kim Briggs and John Sheriff, will deliver the highest standards in restoration services along with expertise and speed in structural clean up and reconstruction for property owners along with contents cleaning of material possessions.

To support the company's ability to provide the latest technologies in emergency services work, Paul Davis sends its technicians to industry training classes to become certified from the Institute of Inspection Cleaning and Restoration Certification (IICRC) in water, fire, smoke and mold.

IICRC certifications, and other formal training courses, are critical qualifications for property restoration professionals. Certified professionals have the training and experience required to understand the frustration and trauma that damage causes. They are qualified to properly evaluate the loss, select the optimum restoration alternative, coordinate with insurance professionals, and ultimately, restore property and contents to pre-loss condition.

"As the local Paul Davis office in Albuquerque for 20 years, the company is an IICRC Certified Firm and is equipped with 15 full-time, certified professionals who are accredited by the IICRC," said Briggs. "The certifications help us to provide customers with full-time professionals who deliver the industry's highest levels of service."

Most recently, Paul Davis' staff members including Israel Jaramillo, Jonathan Null, Alex Casas, and Aaron Harmon became certified mold technicians.

"Due to the freezes in January and February, Albuquerque experienced a high volume of homes and buildings with pipes bursting," said Sheriff. "For many reasons, none or improper drying out, mold is now becoming a threat to the integrity of property structures and can also become a human health risk," he said. "We encourage property owners to contact Paul Davis or an IICRC certified company to investigate the possibility of mold."

The Paul Davis office in Albuquerque provides services including emergency water removal, cleaning, pack-outs, and fire and wind damage restoration and vehicle impacts for large and small losses. Recent customer service scores show that nine out of 10 customers would recommend the company to a friend. Contact Paul Davis Restoration and Remodeling at 505-884-5583 or email newm@pdr-usa.net.
