Paul Davis Emergency Services of Carroll County adds new service

Carrollton, GA – December 21, 2011 - Paul Davis Emergency Services of Carroll County has recently added a new service to the company's professional capabilities. The franchise office is now certified from the American Bio Recovery Association (ABRA) for clean up of biological and chemical contaminants. The staff has been trained to safely remove biohazards and substances and dispose of the materials properly in accordance with the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) and local health regulations. Paul Davis office staff members are now equipped with the required safety apparatus and cleaning products to transform any unsafe location into a clean, safe environment.

According to Eric Morris, owner of the Paul Davis office, the service is available for the purpose of preventing potential and serious health consequences. "When contaminated substances are not properly removed, they can contribute to an unhealthy and dangerous environment," he said.

Specifically, biohazard services include the clean up of sewage backup and dark water along with substances that can promote foul smelling deposits and harmful microorganisms. Paul Davis can remove sewage, moisture and all contaminants to ensure the structure is properly cleaned, disinfected and deodorized.

Additionally, trauma services are available and include the removal and disposal of bodily fluids, tissue and other potentially blood-borne pathogens that result from accident, trauma, crime or death. Crime scene cleanup includes the removal of residues from fingerprint powder, evidence gathering chemicals, pepper spray and tear gas along with the disposal of bodily materials that resulted from crime.
